Well, we staggered through the late "fools'" day without harm to ourselves. No loaded (or any other kind) of cigars came our way; nobody gave us candy with soap inside of it, and the only evidence of the day came when a small, freckled lad came in and asked us for some "striped" paint. Alas, the good old days are no more. In the writer's youth April Fools' day was regarded as a complete failure unless some childish prank resulted in complete embarrassment, great physical or mental discomfort, or broken bones for some innocent bystander.

Likewise Easter. That glad day occasioned nothing but a small dent in the all too invisible roll. It was a nice day, and we got a lot of pleasure out of seeing people decked out in new clothes wending their way to church. The presence of so many new clothes indicates that times could be worse, and really are not as bad as they seem.

Trying to enforce the law on the Santa Cruz grade Sunday a state highway patrolman met disaster in the form of a head-on collision with an automobile. He was not dangerously injured, but he might easily have been killed. He was in pursuit of speeding motorcyclists when, rounding a turn, he was apparently confronted by an automobile which he could not avoid. There are only three answers to that: the car was either on the wrong side of the road; it was passing another machine on a curve, or it was on the right side of the road and failed to move over for the officer when he attempted to pass a car traveling in his direction. All wrong—while the patrolman could hardly have been anything but in the right.

Which brings us down to the truth of the matter: highway patrolmen are regarded by the masses as men who seek to curtail their liberty and should be frustrated at every opportunity from doing their duty. We of the general public are inclined to regard "speed cops" with fear—and consequent dislike. We do not realize that the officers' ambitions is not to arrest us, but rather to keep us from doing things which will make it necessary to arrest us. And when they "take it on the chin" due to some motorist's carelessness, it does not materially increase their liking or their respect for the traveling public. Treat them fair and square, mind the law, and you will have no trouble with highway patrolmen.

Have you ever thought of these fearless men as anything other than "speed cops?" Enforcing the speed law is just one of their duties. It is up to them to keep overloaded trucks off the road; they must be familiar with the highway system in order that they may accurately direct inquiring motorists to their destinations; on their machines they carry first aid kits, fire extinguishers, fusees, etc., and particularly on isolated highways, they are the first to arrive on the scene of a wreck where, as the case my be, they are

Verse Speaking Choir Of State College Here 17th

This community is to have the opportunity of hearing the noted "Verse Speaking" choir of the San Jose State college on the evening of Friday, April 17, in the grammar school auditorium.

This kind of choir is quite new in this country, organized by Dr. Virginia Sanderson, head of the speech arts department of the college after a visit to Europe and the British Isles, where such choirs were established in the churches of Scotland following the abolition in Puritan times of music and singing.

This group was the first of its kind in this country, but two others have since been organized on the Pacific coast, and Miss Sanderson, who is now on leave at Columbia university, New York, has been besought by eastern cities to establish them there.

Selections of noted rhythmic quality are recited in unison, with groups taking different parts as in songs. Among the pieces which this group has presented in its recitals are Vachel Lindsay's "Congo," Hilare Belloc's "Jim," the "Twenty-third Psalm," Malcom Douglas's "Family Drum Corps," Rudyard Kipling's "Boots," and Miss Sanderson's "Quarterly Examination."

"The purpose of such presentation is to give fuller interpretation of poetry and the rhythm and harmony of speech through recital by several voices of different qualities in unison," said Miss Elizabeth Jenks, acting head of the speech department and director of the choir.

The appearance of the group in Campbell is being sponsored by the Spring division of the Congregational Guild, which is also serving a chicken dinner in the school cafeteria preceding the recital. Tickets for the dinner must be purchased not later than Wednesday night, April 15. Seats for the entertainment may be reserved at Clark's Drug store.—either may be obtained separately, or both for a reduced price.

KARL BOHNETT INJURED IN HEAD-ON SMASH SUNDAY

State Highway Patrolman Karl Bohnett was injured in a head-on collision with an automobile driven by J. K. Ormsby of Monterey at Windy Point on the Santa Cruz grade Sunday. Bohnett was chasing five reckless youths on motorcycles and was passing one car, crashing into the oncoming car which failed to give him sufficient room to get by.

Officer Lyman Feathers of Los Gatos took Bohnett to the emergency hospital in Los Gatos where examination revealed a badly injured leg, head contusions and side injuries. After treatment he was taken to the home of his father, Joseph Bohnett, near Campbell. His condition is said to be not serious.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS WEEK WILL BE OBSERVED HERE

Calling upon the 165,000 members of the parent-teacher organizations of California to co-operate in every way in the 12th annual observance of Public Schools week, beginning April 20, Mrs. W. A. Price of San Diego, president of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers, today in San Francisco, through the state committee in charge of the observance, urged parent and teacher groups in the different communities to unite with other civic and community organizations "without distinction of race, creed or caste" to make the week successful.

The Campbell schools are planning something for this week but as yet no plans have been completed. Last year the week was celebrated with programs in both schools in the early part of the week.

Herbert Steindorf, Louise Murray Wed In Santa Cruz Feb. 15

Sunday morning, Feb. 15, the Methodist Episcopal parsonage in Santa Cruz was the scene of a wedding at which Miss Louise May Murray of San Diego county became the bride of Herbert William Steindorf, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Steindorf of Johnson avenue. The Rev. J. C. Carpenter performed the ceremony which was witnessed by Beatrice Carpenter and Grace Andrews, both of Santa Cruz.

The newly married couple have endeavored to keep their marriage a secret from their many acquaintances, but rumors indicating a recent wedding were run down by suspecting friends, who found the event recorded at the Santa Cruz county court house. Congratulations are coming in from friends and relatives throughout this community, and elsewhere the newly-weds are known.

Come Join The Local Chamber Of Commerce

Editor the Press:

This is a direct appeal to the good citizens of this community. The Chamber of Commerce has work to do, and your support is needed. Come to the meetings—bring your $2 and become an active, voting member. It's so easy to "let George do it," and so easy to tell some one else how it should be done—we need you, your support, and your money.

Willow Glen is organizing a new Chamber of Commerce. Her citizens are so interested that 150 people came to the meeting. Campbell will grow and develop in proportion to the enthusiasm of her people.

We have some major projects that are of vast interest to every citizen and we are ready to go ahead and put them over. Come on and help or at least be in a position to put up a legitimate scrap—don't stay outside and howl if some one else wants to go ahead.

Here's to a united and fast growing community.

"Our California Wards" Topic Of Country Women

The program committee composed of Mrs. L. Shelley, Mrs. J. D. Blaine and Mrs. Herbert Shadle had arranged a most interesting program and display of Indian basketry for the Monday meeting of the Country Woman's club.

Miss Olga Brydon and Miss Betty Keesling played two piano duets, "In the Woodland Mill" and "Iris." Three pupils of Mildred Barrett presented dancing numbers, with Helen Cargiamela at the piano. Wee little Jane Fairfield gave a Spanish dance and a tap version of "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers;" Yolanda Cargiamela did a tap buck dance with an encore, and Glenna Bell Moenning an "Athletic Novelty."

The topic for the day was "Our California Wards; Indians, War Veterans and Others." Mrs. Shelley had just returned from a visit to a former home in the Sierras near the headwaters of the San Joaquin, where the Mono Indians live. She described very interestingly their rancherias, their basket weaving, acorn mush, bead work, etc.

She spoke of the great improvements noticeable in cleanliness, sanitation and personal appearance through education in the mission school and the government schools. Many of these children go to the government school at Riverside. Judging by the work she saw, basket weaving will not be a lost art for some time to come.

Mrs. Marks, one of the 15 "reconstruction aids," as they are designated, teaching occupational work at the base hospital at Palo Alto, was present and described their work. Occupational therapy is used only as a mental aid and is all carried on by the advice of the doctors under supervised aid.

There is a great variety of work provided, gardening, painting (both for utility and artistry), wood work, editing and printing a paper, weaving of all kinds, basket-making, rug-hooking, and one group, not mental patients, work in leather.

Mrs. Marks had some beautiful pieces of work which the boys had made, and many of which are for sale. She said that visitors are welcome at the hospital and many articles are exhibited in the display room.

During the business session a nominating committee was elected to present a roster of names for directors to be presented at the next meeting and voted upon at the annual meeting May 4.

More than 250 letters will be sent to ranking individual players in leading clubs asking them to come to the tournament, Merle McCoy, manager of the Hillview Golf club where the tourney will be held, declared. Entry fee of $2 will be charged, he said. The fee includes one free practice round over the course Friday or Saturday.

The Fiesta de las Rosas trophy of engraved silver will go to the player with the lowest gross score. The winner will be permitted to keep the trophy until next year's tournament when he must play for it again or turn it over to the winer of that event. It must be won in three tournaments before it becomes the permanent possession of the winner.

Plans are also being made for a county tennis tournament which will culminate on May 14, the second day of the fiesta. Kite fighting, a major sport among the Philipinos, will be one of the features of the athletic events. Marbles, swimming, baseball, freak races and other playday events will also be held.

A wrestling tournament in which members of various California clubs will compete will also be held. A wrestling exhibit in which al types of the sport from the early Grecian events will be shown, is also on this program.

This is the first year that the fiesta has had a definite athletic program and it will become a part of the event in the future, in the opinion of J. Elmer Morrish, president of the fiesta.

BASEBALL TEAM DINED AT BUSY BEE SAT. NIGHT

Saturday night the local baseball club was entertained at dinner at the Busy Bee restaurant, the affair being sponsored by men who wish their names withheld.

A table was set for 20 guests, and the menu included fried chicken—and everything that goes with it. The boys enjoyed the "feed" immensely. Brief talks followed the meal which was topped off with a huge cake decorated on top with a miniature ball diamond.

Antone Ferro, club manager, presented each player with a gold watch charm in the shape of a baseball. The member's name and field position were engraved on each one.

Sunday the players trimmed the Louis Repair nine of San Francisco for the second time in two weeks, with the decisive score of 14-7.

President Hoover Urges Economy in National Expenditures—Earthquake Practically Destroys City of Managua—Knute Rockne Dead.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

President Hoover

PRESIDENT Hoover returned to Washington after an eleven-day cruise to Porto Rico and the Virgin islands, with a countenance that approximated the shade of an almost ripe tomato. West Indian sun and wind had burned his face badly, and there was a strong suspicion the skin would peel. There was no question, however, that he was rested, and greatly so, as a result of his leisurely trip.

One of his first announcements was that a tax increase could be avoided if his budget and other recommendations for expenditures were not increased by congress next winter. To that end he appealed to the nation to bring pressure on congress against "the demands of sectional or group interests."

The statement was made in the face of lagging income tax receipts indicating a treasury deficit of perhaps $800,000,000 at the close of the current fiscal year, June 30. It was regarded as part of the President's effort to mobolize public sentiment against further soldier bonus legislation, farm-relief appropriations or similar proposals in the new congress to convene in December.

Senator William E. Borah, Republican insurgent, Idaho, retorted, through the press, that "the record is that congress has appropriated less than the budget bureau has recommended each session for the last few years." He declared his willingness to cut off the $90,000,000 provided for the administration's naval building program.

A BLIZZARD in Rocky mountain and plains states took a toll of eleven lives, including five children, two men and a woman in Colorado. Scores were in a serious condition from frostbite and exposure.

Thousands of cattle perished in a wide area including Wyoming, Colorado, South Dakota, Nebraska and the western parts of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. In the southern part of the storm area, peach, apricot and other stone-fruit crops were ruined.

The child victims of the storm were pupils at Pleasant Hill school, Towner, Colo. The morning of the blizzard Maude Moser, the teacher, ended classes because of the storm. Carl Miller arrived to take the pupils to their homes in the school bus. Miss Moser started to walk to her home. There were twenty-two children in the bus when Miller started, all between the ages of eight and thirteen.

Three miles from Pleasant Hill the bus plowed into a snow drift ten feet deep and stalled. Outside the mass of falling snow was a curtain, obscuring the road, tracks and covering fences. Miller tried to back toward the school but could not get the wheels of the bus free from the drift.

After remaining with the children for many hours, Miller realized he must get aid or all would perish. In the driving storm he started out, thinking he could reach a farmhouse. Struggling on for more than three miles he fell exhausted in a cornfield and perished.

Five of the children were dead when a rescuing party found them, but the rest were saved.

There were other tragedies in the storm that swept the mountain states and other sections; but this tragedy was one to arouse the utmost pity. Bravely the children met their fate! They sang and boxed and played to keep warm, as they were told by the driver before he left them to seek aid, as urged by the young leader put in charge, until the merciless wind and chill benumbed them into helpless drowsiness.

Knute K. Rockne

KNUTE KENneth Rockne, football coach of the University of Notre Dame, with a name that became a collegiate byword, plunged to his death with five fellow passengers and two pilots on a Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., air liner in the mid-Kansas grazing country.

Witnesses said the craft, flying through clouds and fog, lost a wing in the air and hurtled to the ground like a crippled bird.

Rockne had only recently recovered from an illness which a year ago had threatened to terminate his brilliant coaching career. Last year, however, he developed one of the very best of his many excellent teams, and made a schedule for 1931 which indicated that he looked forward to an equally great team this year.

President Hoover in an official statement described the death of Rockne as "a national loss."

American football sustains a great loss. Americans lose one who typified the best in useful, wideawake citizenship.

THE development of Fascism in Italy is to be marked further on July 1 of this year by the banishment of the twelve good men and true from the penal courts of Mussolinland. Juries are abolished with the reform of the courts of assizes, or those which try criminal cases, which Premier Mussolini will put in effect three months hence, and for them will be substituted a juridical committee, or what's called a "college" consisting of two professional judges and five nontechnical citizens who are called "assessors."

But every one cannot be an assessor. Only special categories of citizens who have had moral and intellectual, if not political attainments, will run the risk of having their names in the wheel to be drawn as assessors.

The reform of the courts of assizes and the abolition of the jury is a result of the reformed penal code in Italy, a work on which Minister of Justice Rocca and his collaborators have labored for five years. The reform was brought about by what were considered scandalous decisions often returned by juries made up of men of insufficient intellectual attainments to distinguish between the facts and the emotional bunk of the lawyers.

Discontent with these abuses had accumulated in less than a century for the jury system was only introduced in Italy in 1848.

Chancellor Bruening

DURING the formal adjournment of the German reichstag the Bruening cabinet is armed with parliamentary certified dictatorial powers to run the country until next autumn, when the reichstag reconvenes. The government also prepared measures to curb attacks on President Hindenburg and other high officials.

The emergency decree enormously curtails the vital civic rights anchored to the German constitution. Basing the action on article 48 of the constitution, enabling the President to take dictatorial measures when "security and order are threatened," the decree curtails the personal rights of citizens such as the freedom of speech, the inviolability of homes, freedom of the press, secrecy in the mails, the right to meet when unarmed, the right to form associations, or own property.

Public announcements of political gatherings must be confined to the barest facts. Newspapers infringing upon the terms of the decree may be suspended for eight weeks, and other publications may be suspended for six months.

The public speaking "muzzle decree," the old timers eloquently claim, is more severe than a "ukase" in the days of the former kaiser.

During adjournment committees will continue working on a mass of internal reform projects, and the reichstag can be called together at any time on the demand of one-third of the members, or the council of elders can authorize such a special call by majority vote.

RUSSIA bade open defiance to the international grain conference at Rome when Abraham Kissin, Soviet delegate, declared that, far from reducing her wheat production, his country would increase it this year and that instead of giving up her policy of so-called "dumping," she intended to increase her wheat exports in order to pay for her imports, which exceed $500,000,000 a year.

"Any proposal to exclude from economic intercourse a nation occupying one-sixth of the world's surface is foredoomed to failure," Kissin said. "Russia's population is increasing at the rate of 4,000,000 a year, which is proportionately twice as great as the increase of Europe's population, therefore we must increase our wheat production."

The United States Agricultural department has estimated that spring wheat plantings would be reduced 14.7 per cent. This exceeded the hope of the farm board for a 10 per cent cut.

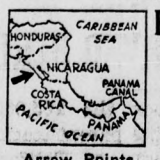
President Machado

THE Cuban Supreme court has given a decision against President Machado's suspension of newspaper publication, holding that he acted in violation of the constitutional provision guaranteeing free speech when he shut down presses which had published information and criticism distasteful to the government. Mr. Machado set forth the necessity of public security and order as reason for the prohibition of publication but without any showing that there was an emergency or that the newspaper comment was contrary to the public good.

A VAST financial organization with millions of capital to relieve the cotton producers of the South from the distress caused by low prices of their commodity, is declared to be in process of formation by Chicago capitalists, headed by William Wrigley, Jr.

Details of the scheme have not been revealed, but the main idea is understood to be to accumulate large quantites of baled cotton and hold it for higher prices. Cotton is now selling at prices ruinous to the planters and is a drug on the world market.

The plan is also said to embrace a system of trading credits by which the vast surplus of cotton will be exchanged for commodities, of which the cotton growers stand in dire need. These include farm equipment of all kinds, groceries and clothing.



Arrow Points to Managua

FIRE, which followed earthquakes in Managua, Nicaragua, took an estimated toll of 1,000 dead and many thousands injured, many of them Americans. The American legation, the British legation and Nicaraguan government buildings were all destroyed. Fire following the earthquake razed twenty blocks of the business district, causing an estimated property damage of $30,000,000.

American agencies were quick to respond to the need for help. The Red Cross rushed supplies. Marines, sent to the little republic on a political mission several years ago, were used to maintain order and relieve distress.

It is too early to know definitely the extent of the disaster. Managua's population was in the neighborhood of 40,000. The region of this city is dotted with evidences of its volcanic character, and history records at least two major volcanic disasters. Nicaragua has been less afflicted with earthquakes than its Central American neighbors.

So far as is known there is not a habitable building left in the once beautiful Central American city, the second in size in the republic. President Moncado himself abandoned the national palace for a tent.

BASEBALL loses two of its major luminaries in the passing of Ernest S. Barnard and Byron B. Johnson, the president and the ex-president of the American league dying within sixteen hours of each other. Both devoted their lives to the American national game. Their terms of service in the presidency spanned the life of the league itself.

When Johnson quit the sports desk of a Cincinnati newspaper to seek his fortune in the business administration of baseball, James J. Hill had arrived as the empire builder of the Northwest, and John D. Rockefeller had established the dynasty of Standard Oil. As each of those in his separate sphere wore the Napoleonic mantle, so Johnson did in baseball.

Mr. Barnard would have been fifty-seven years old on July 17. He had been re-elected president of the American league for a five-year term. His activity in connection with the draft controversy and in the adoption of the schedule is believed to have hastened his death.

Senator Fess

A CHANGE in the leadership of the Republican national committee, it is admitted, has been under discussion by party chieftains but responsible spokesmen insist no plans have been agreed on. Despite continued silence by the national chairman, Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, one high Republican spokesman predicted important developments within the next few weeks.

Fess has given no indication of an intention to retire in the near future, though it has been generally understood for months he would like to be relieved of the chairmanship.

Among those being discussed for the chairmanship are Secretary Hurley, Postmaster General Brown and David Mulvane, Republican national committeeman from Kansas.

THE $1,000,000 libel suit Gus O. Nations, former prohibition agent, filed against Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney general, in 1929, in connection with a series of articles she wrote about prohibition enforcement was stricken from the docket in Federal court at St. Louis for failure to prosecute.

Mr. Nations said he could not proceed any further with the suit because he had been unable to obtain service on Mrs. Willebrandt, but he asserted that suits for $20,000 damages each were pending against her in New York and Washington for alleged injury done to him by the articles.

The only observation of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt to the news that the $1,000,000 libel suit filed against her by Gus O. Nations had been stricken from the record was: "The action speaks for itself."

She would make no other comment than that the inference the suit had been dropped because papers could not be served upon her was "amusing." At her office it was said she had been in Missouri several times since the suit was filed, and that her presence there had been widely carried in the press.

If the average driver could officiate at as many wrecks as does the average motorcycle officer, he would readily see why the officers are anxious to hold down the speeders, particularly the drunken driver, who is no less than a potential murderer.

With operations starting on the Boulder dam project, there should be jobs—and long time jobs at that—for a lot of men. If the contractors who are erecting the structure attempt to build the dam with Mexican labor when there are so many thousands of American citizens are in need of the work, drastic action should be taken by the federal government to bar Mexicans from the job—even from entry into the United States. Now is a poor time to supplant needy white men with the riffraff of other nations.

That's all.

What Became of William Turner?

AMONG the many interesting and curious facts connected with the history of individuals or nations there are few which possess the grim, compelling qualities of the "disappearance cases"—the instances in which human beings have apparently vanished from the face of the earth, never to be heard from again. But if, in addition, the affair is complicated by the identification of a body which is supposed to be that of the missing person, the matter becomes one of national and sometimes international prominence.

But the apparent impossibility of identifying even near relatives is well illustrated by a case decided in the English vice-chancellor's court in connection with a suit in which the plaintiff wished to establish the fact that a certain William Turner had come to his death.

Turner had last been seen on May 7, while he was being entertained at Guildford. He then presented an emaciated appearance, he was unkempt and unshaven and there were many who were of the opinion that his mind was unsettled and weak. Ten days later a body was found in the River Wey and, at the inquest which was summoned on the same day, two men named Etherington swore that the corpse was that of their father, who was missing at the time.

The friends who had entertained Turner at Guildford, on the other hand, declared their belief that the body was that of William Turner, but it was nevertheless interred as Philip Etherington. A colored handkerchief was found around the neck of the body and this article assisted in the ultimate identification of the corpse some months later when Philip Etherington, supposedly drowned and buried, walked calmly into his daughter's house and told a rambling story of why he had not previously appeared.

The question of the identity of the drowned man was then revived in earnest. The proofs were, to the minds of most people, clearly brought out at last, for William Turner had left behind him at Guildford a fragment of a handkerchief which was found to correspond with the one discovered around the neck of the drowned man. To the vice-chancellor's mind the chain of evidence was complete and satisfactory and judgment was given that William Turner had come to his death by drowning. Yet the two sons of Philip Etherington had positively identified this same body as that of their father, whom they had seen every day for more than thirty years, and with whose facial and bodily characteristics they would be supposed to be as familiar as with their own.

Moreover, in spite of the fact that Turner was quite prominent in the community, most of those who knew him agreed with the Etheringtons as to the identity of the body, despite the fact that they also claimed that there was little similarity between the appearance of Turner and Etherington during life. Nor did decomposition of the features enter into the matter in the least, for the common notion that the human body decomposes rapidly in water is contrary to the fact for, especially during winter or in the months when the water is cold and if the body remains below the surface, the features were often remarkably well preserved. Identification may therefore be comparatively easy, because of—rather than in spite of—the fact that the body had been immersed in water.

No case of a similar character ever created the sensation in England that the Turner affair did, for the reason that the body was not long enough in the water to distort the features in any way, yet neither the Turners, the Etheringtons nor their friends were able positively to identify the drowned man. At first he was buried as Etherington and later the stone above his grave was altered to read "Turner"—yet the latter's family and friends have never been wholly satisfied that it was his body that was interred there.

KIWANIS NOTES
By Heck

Kiwanis were especially favored Tuesday of last week with the interesting talk of Lieut. Commander Stewart Bryant of Stanford, speaking on the World Court. Commander Bryant has had a wide experience well fitting him to speak on this topic. He has served at the embassy at Constantinople, was a member of the Washington naval conference, Philippine mission in 1921, with the Siberian expeditionary forces and as battle fleet secretary.

As non-member of the World Court the United States has as associates Russia and Mexico. Membership in the court does not necessitate membership in the League of Nations. Finances for the court are not controlled by the league. The league cannot alter the court. Consent of the powers interested is necessary for court action and the court is comprised of judges, one only from each nation. These objections at one time raised by the United States have been removed by changing the articles. Mr. Bryant believes that the time is ripe for the United States to enter the court, as there is now opportunity for a big constructive work to be done along the lines of world peace that no other nation can do so well as the United States. The world is waiting for America to show a true brotherhood spirit.

Vice president I. R. Abbott presided in the absence of President D. H. Cramer. Guy Farley acted as chairman. Whoopee! That's what Watsonville club is making at club headquarters in Campbell today. The program is furnished by the "Apple Jacks."

Mrs. C. C. Byrnes and Mrs. James Soutar will entertain the members of the Ada Rebekah Stitching club at the Odd Fellows hall Thursday, April 9.

Miss Miriam Blaine is now the organist in the Centella Methodist church in San Jose.

Ruth and Margaret James spent the Easter vacation with relatives at Mt. Herman.

Communion services will be held Sunday morning at the Congregational church.

P. T. A. MEETS THIS AFTERNOON

The president, Mrs. S. N. Hedegard will have charge of the meeting, and Mrs. Girard, school nurse, will have charge of the program.

Using an inside aerial I have logged 196 stations on my new Philco highboy, among them eight Japanese and many other foreign stations. Although it is now the end of March and reception is not so good as during the cold months, I am still able to bring in these Japanese stations regularly.

Very truly yours,

PUNDITAS MEET WITH MRS. STRAY

The Pundita Circle spent a pleasant afternoon at the home of Mrs. Walter H. Stray Wednesday afternoon when they met in regular meeting.

Miss Julia Pickett of the San Jose Placement bureau gave an interesting talk on the organization and its work. Several interesting items were read from "Business and Professional Law."

During the social hour refreshments were served with a surprise for everyone, it being April Fools' day. Assisting Mrs. Stray were Mrs. J. Pope, Mrs. Wendell Thomas, Mrs. R. Y. Maxon and Miss Helah Laird.

The members of the Immanuel Bible class of the First Presbyterian church of San Jose last night came to Campbell to help C. H. Whitman celebrate his birthday. A guessing game, "men's wives," character readings, stunts and contests filled a very happy evening.

Is IT WORTH 4¢ to be a perfect hostess?

Cooking with electricity is like having a maid at practically no additional cost!

You simply prepare the food, place it in the oven, set the automatic time and temperature controls, and relax. When friends arrive for dinner you look your best. You are at ease. Your mind is not burdened about the meal. You have time for a friendly chat before being seated. When the moment arrives for serving the main courses, simply take the food from the oven—hot—and perfectly done.

The electric range of today has faster cooking elements—as fast as you'd want them. As for cost, the electric range is priced about the same as any other good range. And electric cooking is economical. The average sum that our customers pay for electricity for cooking is 1c a meal per person!

So when 4c worth of electricity can help you be a perfect hostess, why not have an electric range?—especially when the cost of electricity is less than the cost of one serving of ice cream.

A small payment down will place the electric range of your choice in your kitchen, ready to use. Come into our office or a dealer's store and see the beautiful new electric ranges.
